The first International Symposium on Intelligent Technology for Power and Energy Systems

www.itpes.org

Sept. 18-20, 2025 in Amsterdam, Netherlands

With the rapid growth of the global economy, energy demand continues to rise. Traditional energy utilization has led to serious environmental problems, especially global climate change caused by greenhouse gas emissions. Therefore, promoting the informatization transformation of energy systems and developing efficient and sustainable energy technologies have become the core goals of global energy research. In light of this profound significance, we are delighted to announce the first International Symposium on Intelligent Technology for Power and Energy Systems (ITPES 2025) will be held on Sept. 18-20, 2025 in Amsterdam, Netherlands.

ITPES 2025 aims to provide a premier platform for researchers, professionals and enthusiasts to come together and exchange cutting-edge research, insights and experiences in the field of energy systems. Through collaboration and discussion, we seek to address challenges and seize opportunities in this critical sector.
